

August 2, 2016

Make Way For Cowboys

For almost three decades, the last weekend in June has been a special time in Edgewood, IA. The entire population of 864, plus thousands more from out of town, gather for the fun and festivities of the annual Rodeo Days.

In 2016, however, the excitement came before the rodeo as six blocks of South Locust Street were torn up for reconstruction beginning just two months prior to the big festival. Normally, a project like this, including water and storm sewer upgrades, ADA-

August 2, 2016

Make Way For Cowboys

For almost three decades, the last weekend in June has been a special time in Edgewood, IA. The entire population of 864, plus thousands more from out of town, gather for the fun and festivities of the annual Rodeo Days.

In 2016, however, the excitement came before the rodeo as six blocks of South Locust Street were torn up for reconstruction beginning just two months prior to the big festival. Normally, a project like this, including water and storm sewer upgrades, ADA-